Re: Current events Save Blue Trail Range

The media has once again responded to the call for support from the plaintiff in the Blue Trail Range matter. The town of Durham is apparently now considering hiring their own range expert in an effort to "get to bottom of the bullet strike issue". The considerable and costly range improvements that have been made which resulted in the DEP allowing all the ranges except the 200 yard range to reopen seem to be of little consequence. Of course given the clever use of the media achieved by the plaintiff in the past may well have helped the officials of the Town of Durham to have a meeting on the subject. A meeting where all parties to the suit were NOT represented. It is clear that this matter will only be resolved in court making it important that the shooting, hunting and outdoor loving public continue to make donations so that a balanced and equal fight can be put forth.
